Decision by the General Term Which Shatters the Sugar Trust.

The Combination Denounced as a Criminal Enterprise.

All the Members of the Trust to Be Fought by the Attorney-General.

The Sugar Trust, through the North River Sugar Refining Company, has received a deathblow at the hands of the General Term of the Supreme Court.

Judge Barrett's strong arraignment of that meern, and his decision that the Sugar Trust agreement is not only illegal, but criminal, and that the Company has forfeited its charter by joining the Trust, has been affirmed, and the people have good cause for rejoicing.

The decision is directly against the Trust.

Judge Daniels writes the opinion, and Judges Van Brunt and Brady concur. The judges in their decision say that the Trust was a combination to put up prices, thus becoming a criminal enterprise and deserving of the severest condemnation of the law.

In their decision the judges say that it is clear to them that the purpose of the combine was to make money by avoiding competition, controlling the market and regulating the

"A jury," says the Court, "certainly would be fully justified in concluding, from the agree-ment and the other facts in evidence in the case, that the governing object of the association was to promote its interests and advance the prosperity of the associates by limiting the supply when that could properly be done and advancing the prices of the products produced by the companies.

supply when that could properly be done and advancing the prices of the products produced by the companies.

"And that it was intended to be secured by this organization is reasonably free from doubt, and the agreement having for its objects the removal of competition and the advancement of prices of necessaries of life is subject to the condemnation of the law, by which it is denounced as a criminal enterprise."

The indges quote the law, making it a misdemeaner to commit any act injurious to trade or commerce, and they say that as the facts have been developed the Trust in which the North River Sugar-Refining Company entered was created for an unlawful object.

By making itself a party to that association it has abandoned its own duties for the transaction and management of its business and placed its business under the dictation of a Board which legally should have no control over it, and rendered itself liable to the judgment which has been recorded in this action.

The Court holds that the Company has been abandoned and its own individual usefulness as a manufacturing company has been terminated by the power of the Trust.

It became a party to a combination designed to create a monopoly and exact from the public prices which could not otherwise be obtained.

The decision applies to every refinery in the State belonging to the Trust. Attorney-General Tabor and Gen. longer A. Pryor, who prosecuted this case with such vigor, are going to fight the Trusts tooth and nail.

But the Sugar Trust people fully appreciate the size of the bomb that has been suddenly thrust among them, and it is rumored they are about to cour to get under cover and evade the force of the decision.

In Wall street to-day it was whispered that the Trust had made preparations to incorporate a company in New Jersey and that its estensible object would be the manufacture and sale of machinery.

Justices Van Brunt and Brady, of the Supreme Cours, General Term, have decided that the Judge Lawrence affirming the validity of the will. Justice Daniels agrees with Judge Lawrence, making two Supreme Court Judges who believe in the validity of the will and two

The whole matter hinges on the "general trust" which Mr. Tilden intended to create, and which is now declared illegal. His executors— Andrew H. Green, John Bigelow and George Andrew H. Green, John Bigelow and George W. Smith—were endowed with great discretionary powers, for the will practically bequeathed the entire estate, outside of a few special bequests, to these gentlemen, who were to be guided, not by instructions, but by mere suggestions in the will.

The contestant is George H. Tilden, a nephew and several other heirs at law are backing him up, it is said.

What Mr. Tilden wanted his executors to marry out is explained in the following section of his will, which is declared invalid:

The contestants urged that by this section an attempt was made to create a perpetual trust, to decend upon the mere exercise of the will of the executors and trustees, and that the discretionary power in the trustees, and that the discretionary power in the trustees to give or withhold is impompatible with the existence of a trust.

Judge Van Brunt, in his opinion, says:

The radical vice of the entire provision seems to have arisen from the testator's unwillingness to confer any enforceable lights upon any qualified person of body. He seems to have absolute confidence in his executors (which is to be recretted), and therefore the exclusion of that necessary definiteness for which executaviral or trust discretion cannot be substituted under our eventual for the forestant and that the interest of the munificence by which receive the advantages of the munificence by which related the results of the cause the Court to violate rules and statutes which have been adouted as less subserving the interests of the people of this State.

stress, Tired of Her Romance.

Again a ripple of surprise disturbed the usually placid surface of the dramatic profession's sea when the news was spread this morning that Marie Halton, the pretty vivandiere of the "Drum Major" company, who suddenly departed to Europe on the City Paris on Oct. 30 with Diamond Broker Lewis, had tired of the romance and had cabled back that she would return to this city by the same steamer. The message was sent to a friend in this city, through whose influence she secured her engagement with Manager Aronson, and this

Just what has occasioned this sudden change Just what has occasioned this sudden change in Miss Halton's disposition will remain a matter of conjecture until the arrival of the young lady herself, who will then probably explain the true inwardness of her abrupt departure and as abrupt return.

The City of Paris will leave Liverpool on Wednesday next, and is due in this city six days laser.

Miss Halton's sudden flight was the talk of the Miss Halton's sudden flight was the talk of the town at the time of its occurrence, and Manager Aronson was perhaps the most astonished when he heard of it.

The Tucaday before her flight she wrote him a polite note assing to be excused from appearing the following night, to which Mr. Aronson returned a negative reply.

He received an answer in which the fair writer hinted that it would not be necessary for her to make a similar request during the balance of the season.

Mr. Aronson put the note in his pocket and forgot all about it, until the next afternoon, when a note was received from Mrs. Bond, Miss Halton's landlady, informing him that Miss Halton's landlady, informing him that Miss Halton's landlady, informing him that Gasino, and after the surprise was over Miss Georgie Dennin assumed Miss Halton's part in the opera.

In the mean time Miss Halton, accompanied by Sylvis Gerrish and two other friends, had gone to the Inman pier to bid farewell to a Mr. Lewis, a London diamond merchant and an intimate friend of Miss Halton.

The party chatted pleasantly in the cabin until the bell rang for all ashore, and in the rush and excitement it was not until the party reached the pier that they discovered that Miss Halton was not with them.

They looked up at the steamer, which was then leaving the wharf, and saw Miss Halton standing on the deck waving her handkerchief at them and smilling a reply to their astonished questioning looks.

At Miss Halton's pretty flat, 229 West Fortythfid street, a scene of confusion reigned.

to have been nurriedly but entirely divested of their contents.

In reply to inquiries of friends, he stated that his sister came home shortly before midnight and had spent the next few hours in packing up. She awakened him early in the morning and, tehing him she was going to Europe that day, gave him $20 and told him to go to Faisade phia and stay with friends until she returned.

Joseph Lewis, the man with whom Miss Halton is said to have eloped, is reported to be a very wealthy man, and it is said that he has a wife and family in Europe.

He made the acquaintance of Miss Halton when "The Prum Major" was first produced, and was constant in his attentions to her. He has a place of business at 5 Throgmorton avenue, London, E. C.

Miss Halton's right name is Mary E. Prendergast, and she was born and raised in Philadelphia, where her relatives are living.

The John W. McGowan Association is a social

The John W. McGowan Association is a social power in the Third, and it is entirely non-partisan politically, for while its patron saint is a "rank Tammany man," its Freedent is Dan O'Reilly, the son of Police-Justice O'Reilly. McGowan keeps the "Old Fourteenth Ward Market," at 248 Mulberry street, and he was very sanguine of the success of the Tamminy Arms under Cullen. So sanguine that he readily entered into a compact with Policeman Matt F. Daily, of Capt. Mcakim's Mulberry street squad, whereby he agreed in the event of the election of P. Napoleon Oakley to take off his hat, cost, vest, shoes and stockings, and with his trousers rolled up above his liness, to wheel the youthful Daniel J. O'Reilly, fr., in a wheelbarrow around the square bounded by Mulberry, Prince, Marion and Spring Streets.

And at 8 o'clock sharp last night the wager was paid amid the dim of bombs, firerackers and fish-horns, the glare of fireworks and bonfires, and to the music of McArdie's brass band. Everything went off beautifully, only that Charioteer Reilly was jounced and bounced, despite his complaints that the wheelbarrow had been sprinkled with tacks, with their business ends up.

The procession started from McGowan's market, passed up Mulberry to Prince and down Marion street, halting before Justice O'Reilly's for a serenade.

Then it passed on to Spring, to Mulberry, and Marie Halton, the Eloping Casino Song- Dr. Rylance Will Seek Vindication by an Ecclesiastical Tribunal.

> Dr. Rylance's accusers seem to think that their position needs some additional props, so they have added to the list of charges already brought against him that of profanity. They go so far as to say that he was heard to swear in the chancel one Sunday when the organ and the choir got mixed up. This is, of course, denied by the rector's friends, but several of the parishioners say that it would have been excusable, even in the rector, under the circumstances.

It is also said by his accusers that once, while travelling in the Eastern States, Dr. Rylance riend in turn communicated the intelligence to Mr. Aronson, greatly to that gentleman's surwas very much exasperated by the loss of his trunks, and applied several profane epithets to the baggage master.

"Dr. Rylance is entirely innocent of these improprieties, "said Mr. Leavitt, Dr. Rylance's unsel. "and he has taken the right course to fully vindicate himself by bringing this action in the courts against his accusers.

"There is no intention to withdraw the proceedings, and until the cases come to trial there is nothing more to say about the matter. It is probable that they will be on the calendar in a very short time, and will be tried within two months."

probable that they will be on the calendar in a very short time, and will be tried within two months."

Just what action Bishop Potter will take in the matter is still uncertain, for neither he nor Archdeacon Mackay-Smith will have a word to say about the case. Under the canon law the Bishop has the right to appoint a commission of five persons, of whom at least three shall be presbyters, to make an investigation when such cases arise, and Dr. Itylance has requested the appointment of such a committee to try his case. The defeudants say they have fourteen witnesses on their side in the libel and conspiracy suits who will testify overwhelmingly to the dector's immoral and unbecoming conduct. Lawyer Quackenbos claims that Judge Fredman's order directing him to furnish a bill of particulars to the other side was entirely unnecessary, as he was ready to hand over the charges at any time.

Mr. Leavitt, however, says he has not seen them yet, aithough he, as well as Dr. Hylance, has been making every effort to get hold of them for the past two months. Even now all he knows about them is what has been published in the newspapers during the present week.
